Rowlands, Ontario Rowlands was a village in Ontario in Canada. It was located in Kenora District, north of Kenora. The village was named after the Rowlands family, of English origin, who settled in the area after coming to Canada in 1874, following the 1871 general amnesty for land claims and treaty rights. The area was first homesteaded by John Rowlands and his brother Charles. In 1884, the Rowlands brothers, together with neighbours, formed the Kenora Club. Rowlands was a small village, with a post office, general store, blacksmith shop, telegraph office, school, churches (St. George Anglican and Roman Catholic), and newspaper. The village was located on a lake, on Ontario's North Shore, and was a gateway to the iron ore deposits around nearby Porcupine Lake. The main access was by gravel road from the nearby Lake of the Woods, while a second road followed the north shore of the lake to the area where the ore deposits were found. Rowlands first separated from Kenora and was incorporated as a town, in 1919. In 1970, it was amalgamated with Kenora to form the city of Kenora. A method is presented for the determination of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) and indicator PCBs in air samples using a combination of gel permeation, silica gel column and hexane/isopropanol/acetone clean-up followed by gas chromatographic-tandem mass spectrometric analysis. The method gives reproducible and precise analytical data and it has been applied for the analysis of air samples collected during the Survey 570a42141b
