Freeware by Acsidious At the beginning of the day, just like any other, you open your main folder with your windows desktop. As the day goes on, you go through stacks of business cards, school assignments and children's crayons, all of which you'd like to keep and maintain. As much as this is a pain in the a, you've decided you need to put a system in place to sort out all this mess. At some point, you decide that you are just not going to be able to keep track of it yourself and reach for the help of a trusted system to do the job. If you don't take action, the mess will continue to build up... and pile higher and higher. If you had any other options, you would have taken them. When you set up your system, there will be little doubt in your mind that you will soon be hard pressed to find a system that can manage the mess and keep it clean and organized. You thought you'd have to work on the system, and it would be a super long, involved task, so you thought you'd write a system yourself that makes life and keeping track of all the stuff you need that much easier. You'd be totally wrong. Here's how it works, step-by-step... Take a look below at the system and try to put it in place yourself... Maybe you'll figure out it's not going to work for you. If you do manage to get it set up, you'll know there's something missing. You might have a main folder that could hold all of your info... but there's no way to add any info to it. You'll have to either use the desktop itself... or your start menu. If you're using the desktop, you might as well give up at this point. You won't really have a chance to get organized... just a clumsy mess. You'll just get the typical "Open Folder" icon... and the window for your desktop folder... but, oddly enough, this isn't really a main folder. In fact, you'll need to download a program to even do this, and you won't really have a main folder for anything at this
